Sasquatch Duboff was born in the forests of the Pacific Northwest. He is a member of the Nlaka'pamux First Nation. As a young Sasquatch, Sasquatch Duboff was taught the ways of his people. He learned how to hunt, fish, and survive in the wilderness.

In the 1950s, Sasquatch Duboff began to have encounters with humans. He was often seen by loggers and hikers. In 1967, Sasquatch Duboff was captured on film by Roger Patterson and Bob Gimlin. The Patterson-Gimlin film is one of the most famous pieces of evidence for the existence of Sasquatch.

Since the Patterson-Gimlin film was released, Sasquatch Duboff has become a global celebrity. He has appeared on television shows, in movies, and in documentaries. He has also written several books about his life and experiences.

Sasquatch Duboff is a fascinating and enigmatic figure. He is a symbol of the mystery and wonder of the natural world. His story is a reminder that there is still much that we do not know about the world around us.

In Sasquatch Duboff's own words:

- "I am Sasquatch Duboff, and I am here to tell my story. I have been called a monster, a hoax, and a myth. But I am none of those things. I am a real being, and I have a story to tell."
