3 pages | 717 words

Imagine trying to survive on a island alone, a person is lost and could soon be in danger with no way to get help or food at all. A lot can go wrong with a person alone on an island. Since they are alone there is no one there to keep them company which could cause them to go insane. They could even be in danger of need some type of help and not have any one to rely on or to help them try to get out of danger. Now, imagine trying to survive on a deserted island in a group, it will be much more beneficial. Now there is other people trying to help someone in danger or even someone who has better survival skills to help people survive better. Surviving on a deserted island is better in a group. In the novel Lord of the Flies by William Golding there was a group of boys trying to survive on an island. They relied on each other as a group to survive on the island. For example the characters Ralph and Jack. Ralph became the leader at the beginning of the book. However he assigned Jack as the leader of the hunters and his choir as his followers. They could be the army or hunters. (Golding 23). After this point on the boys relied on Jack and his hunters to play their part and find them food and to discipline the group. Which is a main part of surviving in a group, relying on others in order to survive everything has to help in order to survive. In a group there is a lot of knowledge going around and information to help one another. For example Piggy came up with the idea to use the conch to call the others. You can use this to call the others. Have a meeting. That's the way they best let - He beat me, if Ralph (Golding 26). Another time Knowledge was saved on the island when they were held captive the fire. Ralph suggested rubbing two sticks to get fire. Roger suggested You make a bow, and pull the arrow (Golding 40). However, the Jack suggested that use Piggy's specs. Jack pointed out why. He speaks to them as blinding pigs (Golding 42). Without all the suggestions and communication how would they know what to do? Surviving in a group is also better than surviving on a deserted island alone because then there is company. There will be people to talk to and a person won't go insane. In the movie Cast Away, the main character Chuck Noland began to start talking to a volleyball. He was starting to lose his sanity. Being on a deserted as a group that would not happen. In a group a person would have others to talk to and communicate with, keep them company. Having someone else is more beneficial to keep sane. Others might argue and say that surviving alone is better than surviving in a group because, then there won't be any disagreement or any types of it. Another argument is that you only have...
