In his great painting depicting the Battle of Cantigny, Peter Dennis portrays the defence of the American 28th Infantry Regiment / 1st Division, one of the first US units to get into serious combat in April and May, 1918. Placed under command of the French VI Corps, they helped take the town of Cantigny and then hold it against repeated and ferocious German counterattack and artillery fire - a small taste of larger battles to come in June.
